

2008 State 4-H Horse Show

UK COOPERATIVE EXTENSION SERVICE
University of Kentucky – College of Agriculture

DEDICATION

Beth & Gus Wagner

Beth and Gus Wagner have been involved in the 4-H Horse Program for over 20 years. Beth got her first pony when she was just the young age of four, and grew up riding in Pony Club. She advanced through the levels quickly, ending her Pony Club career at the “B” level. Beth’s horse interests since then have been quite diverse, from her Pony Club experienced to riding fox hunters in Illinois, to Western discipline events such as cutting, reining, and western pleasure.

Gus, on the other hand, had never had any interest in horses or riding until he met his wife, Beth. Now he enjoys breaking and training young horses, mostly hunter-types, and working around their farm in Trimble County. His main mount on the trail with his family now is a donkey.

Beth and Gus have been storing, transporting, and maintaining the State 4-H Horse Show jumps for the Hunter Division for several years. Gus even uses his vacation time to attend and help out at the State 4-H Horse Show, long after his children have participated in the program. Every year, they work diligently at painting standards and poles, decorating fences, setting up courses, and helping to bring a great experience to those kids in the Hunter Division.

The Wagner's have two children, Beth and Robbie. Beth, the older of the 2, learned to ride and got her first pony when she could hold her head up as a baby. Beth was actively involved in the Kentucky 4-H Horse program, and showed from when she was 9 years of age until she was 18. She was very successful in her 4-H Horse experience, winning a total of 9 blue ribbons, and receiving High Point in the Hunter Division. Beth still is active in the horse industry today. She owns a Quarter Horse that she shows in small local hunter shows, and manages Saga Farm, a Standardbred farm located in Georgetown, KY.

The youngest Wagner child, Robbie, never had any real interest in showing horses, but enjoys breaking and training with his Dad. He owns a Quarter Horse of his own that he rides. Robbie is currently employed at a scrap yard in Louisville, and helps out at the family farm.

The Wagner's are a very close family and still enjoy camping and trail riding together.

Please join the Kentucky 4-H Horse Program in honoring Beth & Gus Wagner’s contributions to the youth of Kentucky at the Dedication Ceremony, Wednesday, July 2nd at approximately 7 pm.
